

Procuring Specialised Aids

How we help

Specialised aids can help a person with epilepsy and enable them to feel more confident. At National Epilepsy Care, we can assess our service user's needs, recommend and procure aids to help make life easier.

Specialised aids can refer to a wide variety of items that can help to improve the quality of life for service users, including:

- Alert alarms
- Medication information devices
- Medical alert bracelets
- Medication reminders and organisers
- Head protection

Often we find that our service users are not aware of certain aids that may enhance their quality of life and bring them a step closer to independence. We take into account a variety of factors to ensure that our service users are aware of the specialised aids they may find beneficial.
